Statement of Ownership

In 1977 Arthur Keiser^[9] created a career college, the Keiser School, in Fort Lauderdale. In 1982, with the addition of paralegal and computer programs, the school changed its name to the Keiser Institute of Technology. In 1986 the school began to award associate degrees and became Keiser College. In 2006, the for-profit school again changed its name and became Keiser University.^[1] In 2011 the University switched from a profit to a not-for-profit model when Arthur Keiser sold the institution to Everglades College Inc., a non-profit entity founded by Keiser that also operates Everglades University.^{[3][10]}
